

Annual Report

The year that turned the entire world upside down also exposed brokenness on a global scale.

And yet, in 2020 we continued to witness the power of the gospel to transform hearts in every corner of the earth, further reinforcing our conviction that everything.

Jesus changes

Every Prayer (1 Timothy 2:1-4)

Every Believer (John 20:21)

Every Place (Acts 5:42)

Every Method (1 Corinthians 9:20-23)

Every Person (Matthew 24:14)

Unalterable Convictions

1. The great commission must be taken literally. (Matthew 28:19-20)

2. Without unity, finishing the task of global evangelization is impossible. (John 17:21-23)

3. Prayer, alone, will remove every obstacle that stands in the way of fulfilling the great commission. (Mark 11:22-23)

Letter from the International President

Dear Friend,

In the 75-year history of this ministry, Every Home for Christ has never experienced a year quite like 2020. We faced unprecedented challenges in those turbulent months, but when I reflect on the year, those challenges are not what stand out in my memory.

Yes, the COVID-19 pandemic was both far reaching and deeply impacting. For all of us, it was a time of fear and uncertainty.

Yet, as Emerlinda Evangelista, our ministry director in the Philippines, observes: “Jesus has been leading us all along.” That is what I will remember the most from 2020: the presence and guidance of the Good Shepherd.

If the first half of the year felt like an exile, the second half felt like the days of Nehemiah, when Israel returned from exile and rebuilt the Temple. Indeed, 2020 was a year of rebuilding for us. We adapted to changes, and we reimagined what the future of Every Home for Christ could be.

Taking the truth and love to Jesus to everyone in their homes will always be the heart of our ministry. That will never change. But when lockdowns prevented home-to-home outreaches, our ministry model expanded.

You will notice that in addition to reporting on “homes reached,” we now also report on “gospel presentations.”

In the midst of much adaptation and innovation, Every Home for Christ continues to do what it has always done and will always do: shine the light of Jesus into the darkness.

Many of our Every Home teams across the globe have embraced social media, Zoom, and other forms of digital communication as a means of sharing Jesus. We count each of these interactions as a divine appointment. If we cannot reach people in their homes, we will reach them wherever we can.

We have also recognized that many families struggled financially in the past year, and some had trouble putting food on the table. Teams like Emerlinda’s stepped up to respond. They became the hands and feet of Jesus by providing food packets and other forms of practical help to these families in need. We always pray that hearts will be open to the message we share, and we saw those prayers answered as hearts opened like never before in response to these gifts. Every family that received our help also received the truth and love of Jesus.

Finally, we implemented another change that wasn’t in response to the effects of COVID-19 but rather to the leading of the Holy Spirit. This year, we placed a new emphasis on reaching people on the margins of society. The example our executive director Tanner Peake often gives comes from the Muslim world. In these cultures, when our team members knock, the man of the house will often be the one to answer the door. If he does not accept the message they share, it will never make it past the door to his wife or daughters inside.

Reaching these marginalized hearts requires an intentional effort on our part, and that effort began this year. You will read about Sarita Chitapa, our first prayer and margins director in Africa, and how she mobilized other ministry director’s wives to reach out to isolated women.

When I think of all we have endured in the past year, I think mostly of the ways that Jesus came through for us. He led us into new territory, and over 16 million lives were changed as a result. It might be cliché to put it this way, but we didn’t just survive in 2020 — we thrived.

And we didn’t do it alone. Friends of this ministry stood by us, often sacrificially. We are able to do what we do because of their prayers and support. I cannot tell you how much it means to me, how much it means to our teams in 150 nations, or how much it means to the lives that have been transformed for eternity. My heart is simply overwhelmed.

In the midst of much adaptation and innovation, Every Home for Christ continues to do what it has always done and will always do: shine the light of Jesus into the darkness.

For the harvest,

Dick Eastman

Letter from the Executive Director

Dear Friend,

In the storm of COVID-19 and 2020, two things kept us moving forward: the hope we have in Christ and our love and longing for the lost to know him.

The ministry of Every Home for Christ has, in its history, faced challenges and setbacks of every kind. At both local and global levels, we have weathered storms of economic crisis, persecution, natural disasters, political upheavals, and epidemics.

But I believe it is fair to say that the pandemic and surrounding circumstances of 2020 challenged our ministry, at a heart level, unlike any obstacle we have faced before. Those days and weeks and months of quarantines and lockdowns tested our basic understanding of what it means to reach people with the love of Jesus no matter the cost. The last year summoned us to name and embrace our core calling: We have not just a task to finish, but an infinite invitation to see and respond to everyone, everywhere the way Jesus did.

As we navigated these challenges, I have been continually reminded of the history of our ministry. Just before the early days of the pandemic in 2020, I stood at Shibuya Crossing in Tokyo — the world’s busiest pedestrian crossing — with the global leadership of Every Home. We stood with the leaders of our ministry who came before us, seeing every person who passed by and knowing the longing of Jesus to be near to each and every one.

Every Home teams spent 2020 sharing hope in homes, feeding the hungry, caring for the sick, and weeping with those who mourned...

← In the same spirit of those who came before us, we are asking afresh: how can we reach every single person? How can we make sure everyone, everywhere has a chance to know there is a God who loves them? How will we make sure we don’t miss anyone?

Every day, the answers are unfolding in new ways all around us. Throughout 2020, our teams around the world quickly adapted and innovated, leveraging opportunities and navigating restrictions so they could keep bearing a meaningful presence of Christ in their communities. As well-established, locally-based ministries, they knew how to respond to the shifting needs of their neighbors in the love and truth of Jesus. They embraced new technologies, methods, and strategies because they see people with the compassion of Christ, and his love in them cannot be stopped.

In many ways, our experience of 2020 called us deeper into the heart and longing of Christ for his creation. Every Home teams spent 2020 sharing hope in homes, feeding the hungry, caring for the sick, and weeping with those who mourned — because that is what it looked like to reach people in the midst of a pandemic. We believe we must carry that spirit forward with us when the day after the storm of COVID-19 comes.

In 1 Thessalonians, Paul writes, “we proved to be gentle among you, as a nursing mother tenderly cares for her own children. Having so fond an affection for you, we were well-pleased to impart to you not only the gospel of God but also our own lives...” (2:7-8 NASB). As we look to the future of Every Home — a future beyond the pandemic and upheaval of 2020 — we see an invitation to give everyone, everywhere not only the gospel of God but also our own lives. We long to see the gentle tenderness and care of Jesus reach every person, everywhere on earth, no matter what it takes — even if, like nursing mothers, we must give of body and soul to embody the presence of Christ to everyone.

Every person counts,

Tanner Peake

Why?

The world is broken without Jesus. When people encounter him, Jesus changes everything.

The Bible tells the story of how we are all separated from God. Take a look at any newsfeed, and you will see brokenness everywhere. The suffering is real, and people are soul-sick for their Creator.

Many people feel neglected, hurt, and forgotten. Most importantly, many are facing eternal separation and suffering apart from God.

There is only one hope for the world: Jesus. While many are striving to make the world a better place in their own ways, the greatest thing we can do is share the truth and love of Jesus with everyone. When people seek answers, we want them to find Jesus.

Jesus changes everything.

There is an immediate impact when a community encounters Jesus. We've heard countless stories of villages, neighborhoods, and cities that are changed when the people within them turn to God.

What?

We share the truth and love of Jesus.

Spiritual conversations happen in homes, workplaces, events, streets, and even online. People can encounter Jesus anywhere. We meet people where they are, and many times, that starts at home.

A global mission requires that we recognize the unique needs of every country, context, and circumstance.

Therefore, we are engaged in many methods of sharing the gospel, and we will continue to innovate. Home-to-home outreach is our foundation, but we support and develop every method it takes to share Jesus with the entire world.

Our Vision

That every person on earth would have a genuine opportunity to respond to the truth and love of Jesus.

Our Mission

To serve the Church by equipping and mobilizing believers to participate in sharing the truth and love of Jesus with every person and home on earth.

We mobilize and equip.

1. We mobilize and equip churches to share the truth and love of Jesus with their communities.

We come alongside churches with practical and meaningful resources, training, prayer, and programs for rallying their people to reach their communities. We inspire churches by connecting them to a global community of like-minded believers who share a passion for giving everyone, everywhere a chance to encounter Christ.

2. We mobilize and equip pioneer missionaries to ensure no one is left behind.

There are many parts of the world where there is no church or, for numerous reasons, the church is unable to engage publicly. Our ministry offices around the world are dedicated to seeing and reaching people and communities who live beyond the reach of the existing church. In these situations, we mobilize and equip pioneer missionaries who are staff and team members of Every Home. We send these pioneer missionaries everywhere to make sure everyone has a chance to encounter the truth and love of Jesus. We equip them to engage people and communities contextually and meaningfully, and to develop lasting relationships where the life of Christ can grow. Our pioneer missionary teams plant house churches, called Christ Groups, that foster spiritual development.

3. We mobilize and equip individuals to be “salt and light” in their own communities.

We invite individuals to see their neighbors, friends, and family through the eyes of Jesus. We come alongside people as they respond to the invitation of Jesus in their own lives. We offer simple, practical tools to help people embody the presence of Christ in their communities, and we serve through shared story, vision, and calling.

Who We Are

Who? When? Where?

Everyone. Everywhere. In a single generation.

The truth is that God loves everyone, everywhere. It's why we are committed to taking the gospel to every nation, every home, and every person.

We have begun a once-in-a-generation marathon to reach the last home on earth. Every Home for Christ (along with many other organizations) is committed to this challenge — but it takes more than the commitment of a few well-intentioned individuals to make a plan succeed. We need resources, both spiritual and physical.

The world population is projected to surpass 8 billion people in 2024. Don't think of this as just a staggering number. Picture newborn babies and great-grandfathers. Imagine tribal leaders, university students, single mothers, and powerful entrepreneurs. When you picture the people, you clearly see the mission.

In Matthew 24:14, Jesus says, “And this gospel of the kingdom will be preached in all the world as a witness to all the nations, and then the end will come.”

We call this the Oikos Initiative — a movement to reach every family and home on earth with the truth and love of Jesus within a single generation.

Every person
counts.

Case Study #1: Lebanon

The Walls of Lebanon

Even before the explosion, the people of Lebanon were struggling.

They continue to feel the effects of the 15-year civil war, and they have endured other armed conflicts since then. More recently, a financial crisis devalued Lebanon's currency by 600%, forcing hundreds of businesses to close and leaving thousands of people unemployed. Then, of course, COVID-19 happened.

But as serious as these events have been, Ministry Director Simon Ibrahim is far more concerned about the spiritual condition of the Lebanese people.

"Lebanon is the last fortress for Christians in the Middle East*," Simon says. "We have to protect the Christian presence here."

That Christian presence is now actively threatened by the growing influence of Hezbollah. The radical Muslim group seeks to establish an Islamic caliphate within Lebanon, turning the nation into a Shiite state. The frequency at which Lebanese Christians have fled the country has only made this situation worse. As Hezbollah strives to gain control, fewer and fewer Christians remain to oppose it.

"The only reason, actually, I am staying in the Middle East is for this," Simon says. "To bring the gospel of Jesus Christ and to occupy this region and change its culture for him!"

Those who knew Simon in the past would be surprised to hear him now. Raised in a Muslim family in Jordan, Simon was angered by cartoon depictions of Muhammad published by a Danish newspaper. This anger intensified his commitment to the Muslim faith.

"I would have ended up a mujahed [jihadist] in Iraq or Syria," Simon confesses. "...if God hadn't shown me his love."

Challenged by a friend to read the Bible, Simon was struck by Jesus' words in the Sermon on the Mount. Realizing that Jesus is God, Simon's heart was filled with love — and his life was changed forever. Simon became a Christian and immediately shared his faith with his community — but the backlash he experienced forced him to flee from Jordan. In Lebanon, he became the ministry director for Every Home for Christ.

"What God has done in my life and the lives of those around me is extraordinary," Simon says. "I feel an urge to preach the beauty and majesty of Jesus every minute of my life."

Preaching Jesus in the midst of Hezbollah's growing influence has been a challenge to say the least. But that was before the explosion.

On August 4, 2020, a warehouse fire caused a load of ammonium nitrate stored at the port of Beirut to explode. The blast was heard more than 200 miles away. In that moment, 207 people were killed, 7,500 were injured, and 300,000 were left homeless.

"We sit with people who have lost their homes and listen to them," Simon said at the time. "What happened was even worse than what the 15-year-long civil war left behind."

Simon's team quickly formed a plan to help. Their aim was to serve the people of Beirut by repairing the homes that could be repaired. They recruited volunteers, hired handymen, rented equipment, and went to work. They called their project #BeirutIsOurHome.

Because of the economic crisis, it was impossible for many families to repair the damage to their homes on their own. They simply couldn't afford it. But the economic crisis also meant that the U.S. dollar went further in Lebanon than it had before. Necessary repairs to the average home only cost about $200 US dollars. Gifts from friends of Every Home for Christ made a dramatic difference in the lives of these families. In addition, Simon's team provided humanitarian packages, shared meals, and provided needed medication. All the while, they shared Jesus with everyone they met.

"We are not the UN," Simon says. "Reaching people with the gospel will remain the core of everything we do."

As they were walking between homes, one of the Every Home teams found a man weeping in the rubble. He told them that all of his loved ones had been killed in the explosion, and he couldn't understand why his life had been spared. The team sat with him, prayed with him, and shared the gospel with him — and the man gave his life to Jesus that day.

This man's story was not an isolated incident. Since the explosion, Simon's team has reached 213,100 homes, and 4,828 people have responded to the truth and love of Jesus.

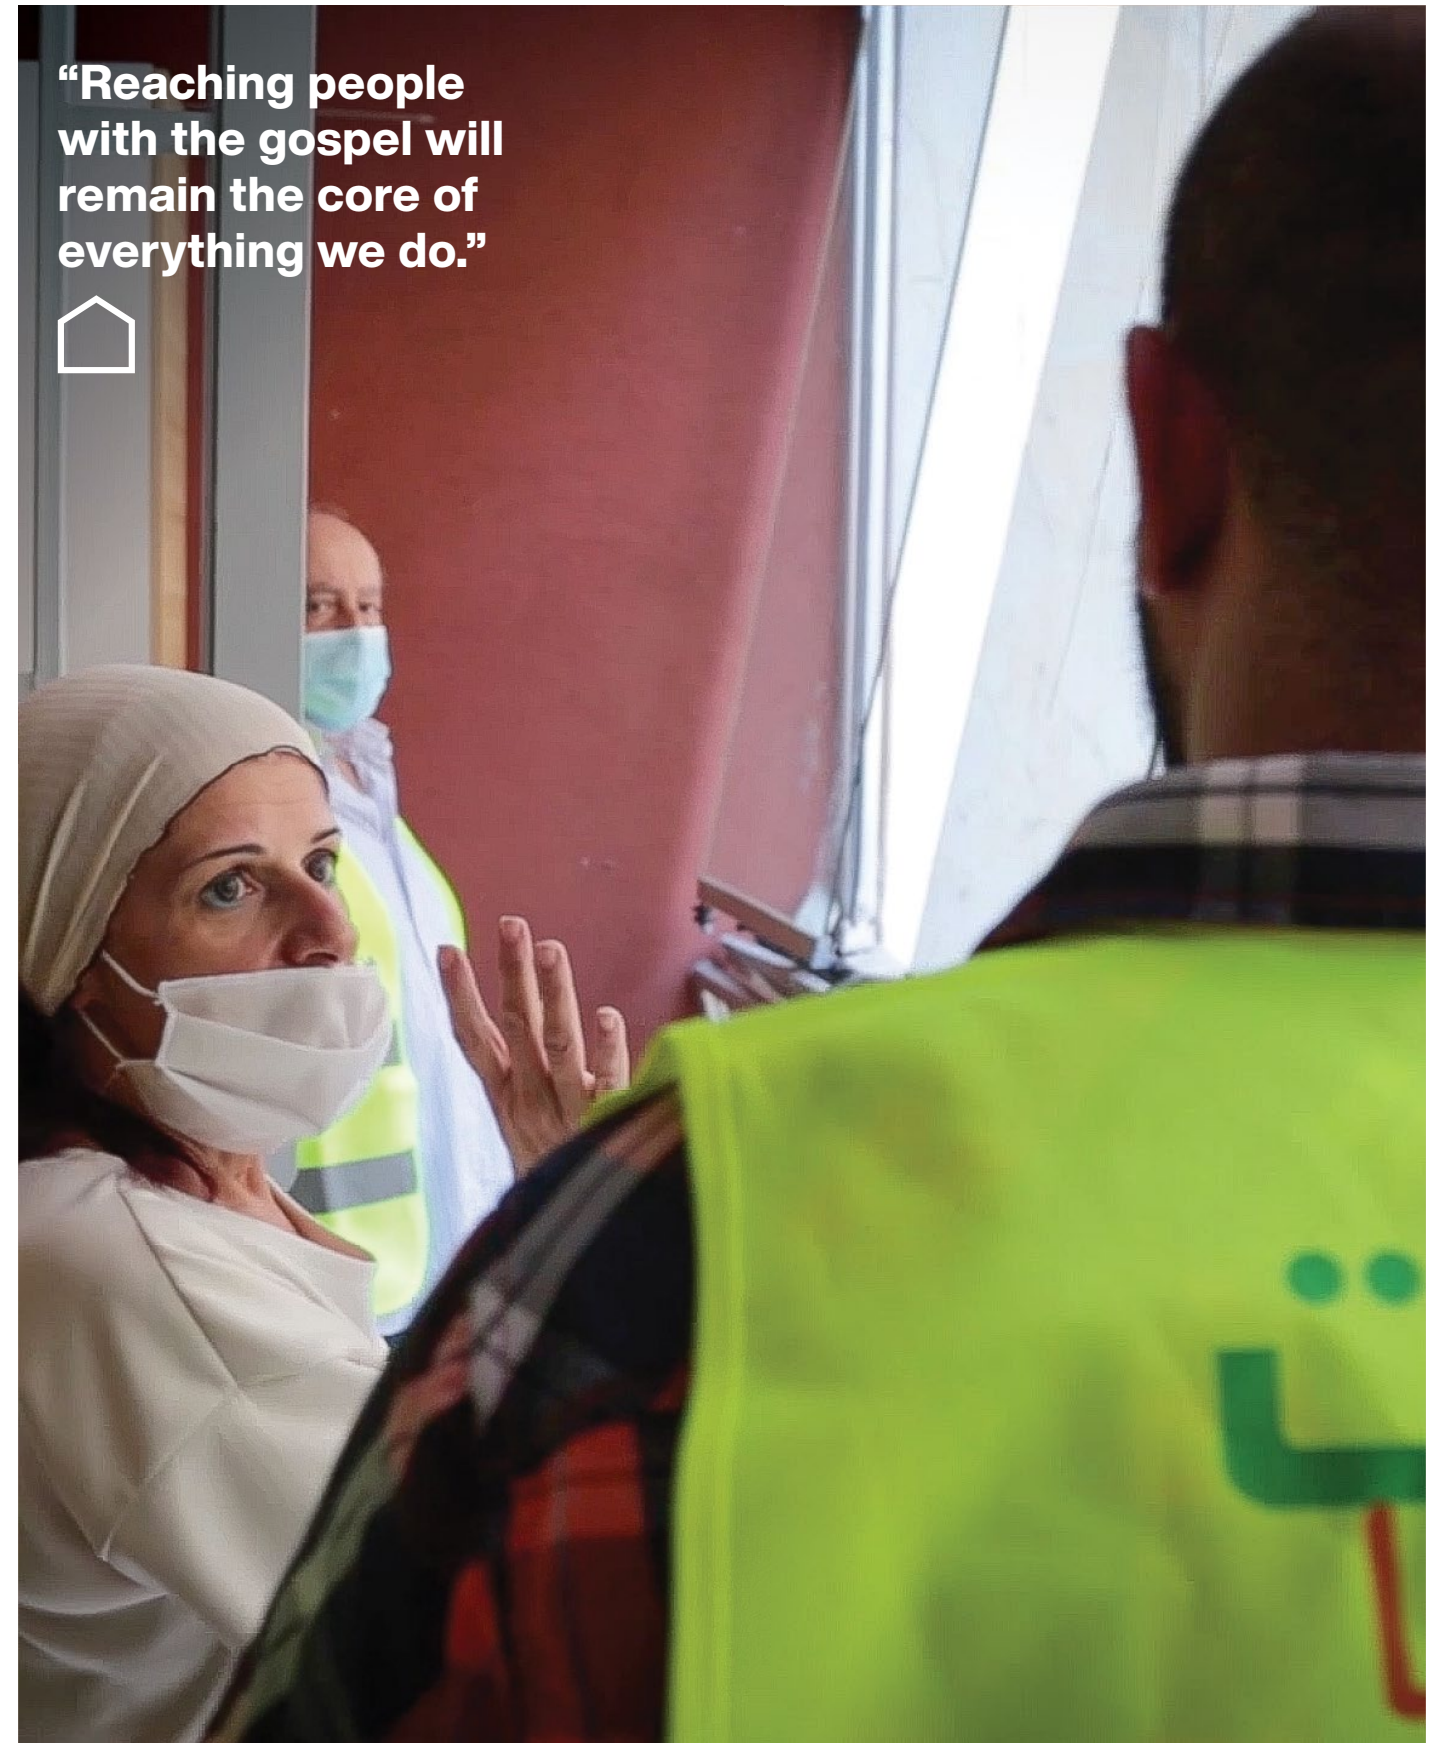

Simon's team has come to expect rejection when they talk about Jesus, but the explosion has softened many hearts to the Savior. Now, new believers come to the Every Home office in Beirut on a regular basis. They grab gospel literature by the handful and share it with their neighbors. What the enemy intended for evil the Lord has worked for good.

"Today, it feels like the walls between us and those who haven't heard the gospel don't exist anymore," Simon says. "The explosion was the catalyst and the beginning of a new era. It opened the doors for us to share the gospel with people who may never have been reached any other way."

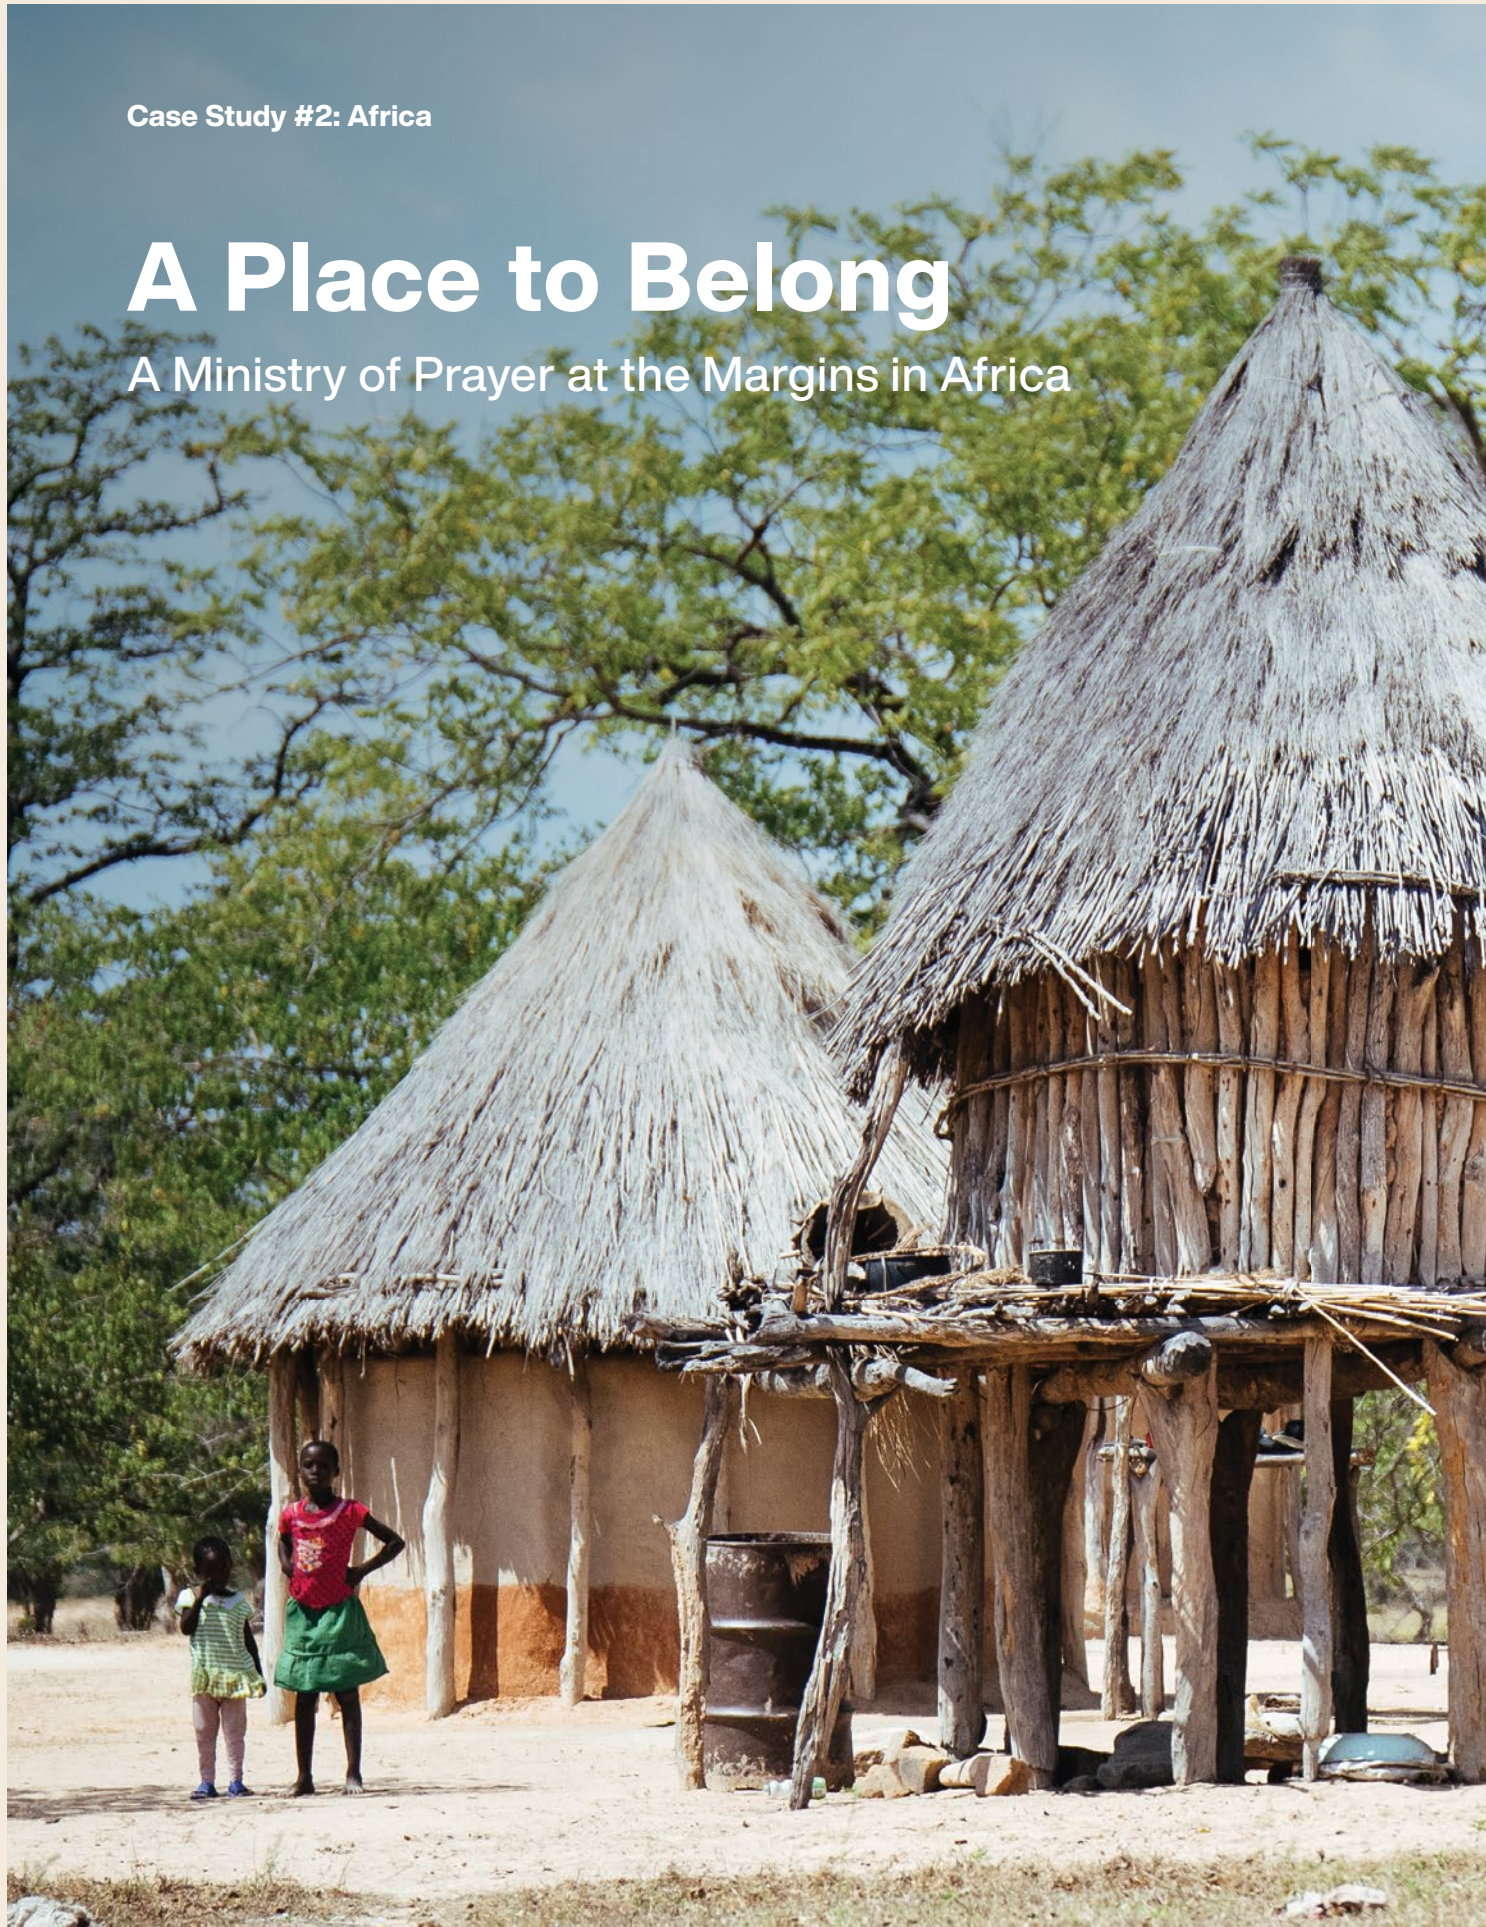

Through human eyes, we might see Lebanon as the man in the rubble saw it — broken by economic crisis, a pandemic, Islamic extremists, and now an explosion — hopeless. Nothing left. No reason to stay. But Simon and his team don't rely on their own understanding; they trust in the Lord. Despite these challenges — even through these challenges — God is still transforming lives. "There is always a way," Simon says, "Not even Hezbollah can stop our materials from reaching every home."

To Simon, Israel is culturally more European than Middle Eastern.*

A Place to Belong

A Ministry of Prayer at the Margins in Africa

When Sarita Chitapa was appointed

Prayer and Margins Director for Every Home's ministries across the continent of Africa in March 2020, the work set out before her was already significant — and that was before anyone knew what the rest of the year or the experience of a pandemic would hold. Sarita had plans to travel throughout the nations of her continent; with prayer workshops, retreats, and conferences in the works. As COVID-19 spread throughout Africa, all of those activities came to a halt. But Sarita's ministry was only just beginning.

For the global ministry of Every Home, our commitment to reaching everyone, everywhere with the truth and love of Jesus means we must be intentional about reaching people and people groups who live on the margins of society. In every community, there are people who are regularly overlooked, left behind, and would fall beyond the reach of ministry without specific intention to reach them with the love of Christ.

"The Africa Prayer and Margins ministry of Every Home aims to identify disadvantaged people groups like the Samaritan woman at the well whom Jesus identified," Sarita explains. Across Africa, this means engaging women who are marginalized for numerous reasons: singleness, separation, divorce, religious or tribal regulations, prostitution, incarceration, or teenage pregnancy. Among marginalized groups in Africa, Sarita also identifies children who are orphaned (especially those who are over 12 and living on the streets), people who have disabilities, and the elderly.

Lockdowns were introduced across African nations in April 2020, and ministry was disrupted. "Suddenly, we were not able to meet physically for church, for prayer meetings, or even to share the gospel from house to house," Sarita says. And when lockdowns eventually lifted, the pandemic continued to limit and change what kind of ministry was possible.

Meanwhile, the situation for marginalized people groups in Africa worsened. People lost access to the help they needed. Single, self-employed women struggled to run small businesses. Children who survive by begging on the streets could not find money or food. People who are disabled or elderly were left hungry and alone. Children without internet access could not continue their education. Social issues like substance abuse, theft, teenage pregnancy, and prostitution rose.

Yet, Sarita sees the coming of COVID-19 as "a blessing in disguise" because, through the circumstances of the pandemic, a network of prayer was born. And that prayer network would become the foundation of new ministry initiatives to reach marginalized people groups all across Africa.

In her new role as prayer and margins director, Sarita wanted to connect with the wives of Every Home ministry directors across Africa. But with lockdowns in place, Sarita wondered how she would even be able to meet these women.

"I carried out a survey on the types of digital devices our ministry directors' wives had access to, and whether they were able to access the internet," Sarita says. She found that most of the women had smartphones and access to social media with at least some limited internet.

Sarita began gathering Every Home women from nations across Africa for Zoom prayer meetings.

"Zoom became the new building to gather saints in prayer!" she says. Sarita adapted Every Home's Change the World School of Prayer and Global Prayer School resources to connect with the women, encourage them, and equip them to develop their own ways of sharing the truth and love of Jesus. Over Zoom, WhatsApp, and similar platforms, this community of women listened to lessons, shared their reflections, and developed their own style of teaching others.

Case Study #2: Africa

As this community of Every Home women prayed together over the people of their nations, they began to see invitations and opportunities to reach people living at the margins of their communities. A simple Zoom prayer meeting grew into a network of Every Home women mobilized to reach marginalized people groups in their own communities — specifically, personally, and meaningfully.

Sarita started by encouraging the wives of Every Home Africa ministry directors to contact two pastors from church denominations other than their own with a request to identify two single women (especially widows or single mothers) in their congregations who might be in need of a basket full of groceries and who would want to engage in this prayer network.

“Our aim was to reach women who are often isolated and deeply troubled,” Sarita says. These vulnerable women were provided baskets full of groceries, along with prayer resources.

Sarita says her team of Every Home women truly went the extra mile as they began to connect with the churches and women in their nations: “Some women have physical needs. Some require skill development in order to survive. So wherever possible, we aim to meet those needs. Then we invite those women to become intercessors and be part of our network of prayer.” In just the final months of 2020, Sarita’s team engaged 39 churches and connected with 137 women across the nations of Africa.

One of those 137 women is a pastor’s widow in Mali. Grieving and alone, she had turned away from the Lord because of the difficult circumstances following the death of her husband. Now she has returned to Christ and belongs to this network of women of prayer.

Another 17 of those 137 women are from Nigeria. After receiving food baskets and prayer resources from the Every Home team, they began meeting twice a week to pray and complete lessons from The Change the World School of Prayer together.

Still another is Jelinah Debora from Manembe Village in Zambia. She says, “I am 52 years old with six children. I was in a traditional church for about four years, but I never knew how to pray effectively. I used to think only the pastor and church leaders were supposed to pray. When Mrs. Muleya and Mrs. Zulu came to my village with their team and started teaching on prayer... This has changed my prayer life.”

The Prayer and Margins Ministry of Every Home Africa is creating a place to belong for people who are marginalized across Africa — a place of prayer. In this way, Sarita and the network of Every Home women in Africa are not only meeting felt needs; they are partnering with the spirit of Christ to nourish a sense of agency, possibility, and deep connection with the gospel story in the lives of the people they reach.

Although it is difficult to anticipate the circumstances of the coming months of ministry (travel is still restricted throughout the continent), Sarita anticipates significant opportunities to continue reaching people living on the margins of society throughout the nations of Africa. She plans to continue skill development among her team of Every Home women; to conduct more in-depth research to understand the needs of marginalized people groups and how to minister to them; to pursue making resources for prayer and ministry available in more languages and to teams who do not have reliable internet access; and to explore the role of humanitarian aid and skill development in connecting with and ministering to marginalized people groups.

This ministry initiative, birthed in the pain and complexity of a pandemic, is only the beginning of a movement of belonging, connection, and prayer — a movement that is already bringing the love of Christ to people living at the margins across Africa.

“This ministry initiative, birthed in the pain and complexity of a pandemic, is only the beginning of a movement of belonging, connection, and prayer...”

Nourishing the Philippines

Emer loves to cook. “In the Filipino culture, and in my generation,” she says, “girls are trained to be good at any household chore. One of them is cooking.” Emer grew up watching her mother, her grandmother, and her aunt in the kitchen. They would cook and bake and then sell food to neighbors, laborers, and office workers.

From a young age, Emer joined her mother, aunt, and grandmother, learning from them how to make a variety of dishes. She would wake up at 4 am from Monday to Friday and assist them in the kitchen. This was not the era of instant cooking appliances, and every ingredient was prepared from scratch.

Emer’s journey after high school took her far away from the kitchen of her mother. After university, she moved to Saudi Arabia to work a much sought-after job in a hospital setting. During that time, she met her husband, encountered Jesus and committed her life to him, and then felt clearly called to return to the Philippines for the sake of reaching her people with the same love and peace she had found in Christ.

When Emer and her husband returned to the Philippines, they connected with Every Home Philippines, a ministry that has been active in the island nation since 1960. After serving in many capacities over the years, Emer was appointed as the ministry director for Every Home Philippines in 2012.

Of course, Emer never stopped cooking. After marrying and starting a family, she took interest in cooking for her own family. “I wanted to give them dishes that reminded me of my childhood,” she says. “I love when I get to see my family enjoying a meal I prepared. In church gatherings, too, it is my joy to cook and feed people.”

So it is no surprise that as she watched the crisis of COVID-19 begin to sweep her nation, Emer was ready — spiritually and physically — to feed her people.

With flights shut down, stay-at-home orders in place, and general movement strictly limited to frontline workers, life and ministry changed drastically for Emer. “At the beginning of the lockdown, as an Every Home Philippines family, we came to the Lord in prayer through video calls,” she remembers.

The team quickly developed new ways of connecting with and supporting their church partners, mobilizing prayer over Facebook and Zoom, and even calling local pastors, one by one, to listen to their challenges and pray for their situations. They started radio programs to address issues like faith, marriage, and parenting during the pandemic. They launched “synchronized prayer walls” over social media, encouraging local churches and pastors to “spread hope, not fear” through simple videos filled with scripture and prayer for their nation.

As the economic situation worsened, Emer and her team began sending packages of rice and groceries to local pastors who had lost work and income. Soon, they began reaching people across their nation with food packages, gospel booklets, and prayer. “People are so grateful to receive groceries from strangers,” Emer says. “A simple ‘God loves you’ can bring big smiles to their faces.”

One local pastor told Emer, “Food for the body makes a big difference in sharing the love of God!” Indeed, Emer says, “To attend to physical needs in the midst of crisis opens hearts to the word of God. People are so grateful everywhere.”

This outreach is not simple. The team must navigate quarantines, permits, various documentation requirements, and health risks. Because of global shipping delays, resources have been unreliable and costs are higher. But Emer and her team are committed to doing whatever it takes to make sure the Filipino people receive the nourishment they need during this crisis — and beyond.

Case Study #3: The Philippines

When pandemic lockdowns began, Emer sprang into action in her family's kitchen. She created a schedule for every member in her family to participate in preparing home-cooked meals. They cooked pasta, baked spaghetti, lasagna, pancit guisado, pork adobo, and chicken curry. They filled their own table, and at times they even shared with neighbors, village guards, and street cleaners. Emer's table, full of good and nourishing things even in the midst of a pandemic, is the fruit of many years of faithfulness to the task — of early mornings, of disciplined practice, of learning the nuances of her family's dishes.

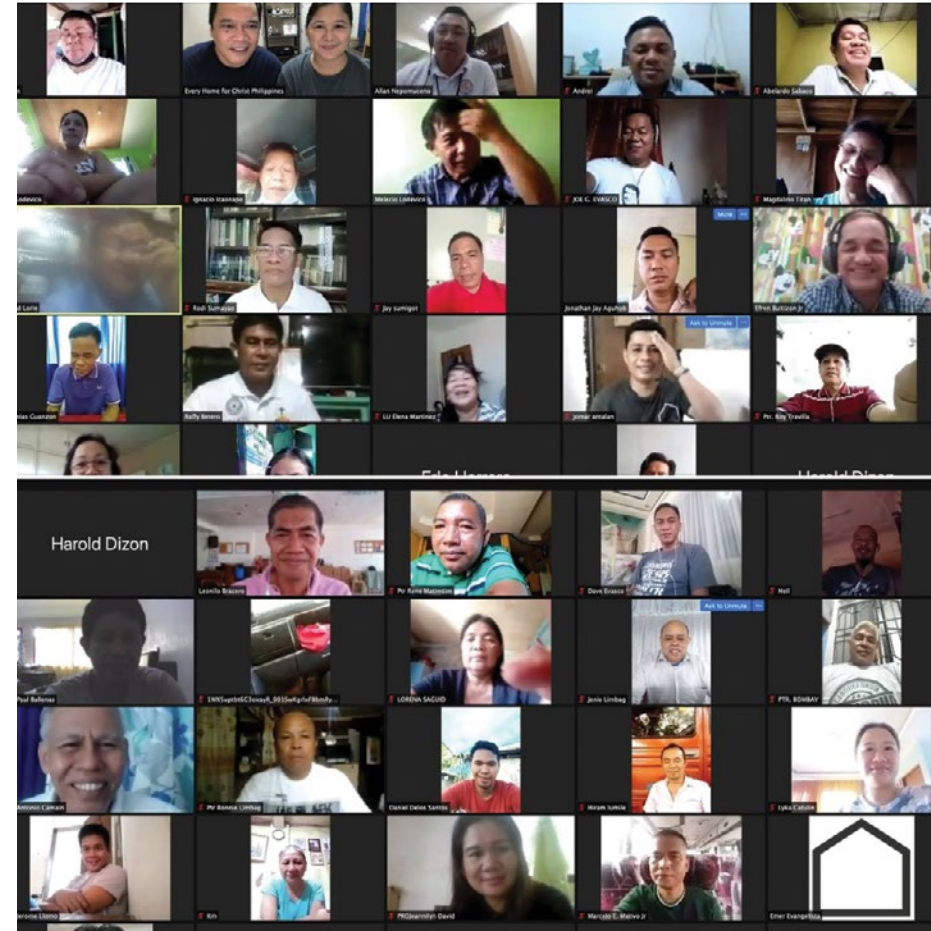

Likewise, Emer sprang into action to meet the needs of her nation as it faced a pandemic. She set the table of Christ for the Filipino people. Her Every Home Philippines team has been able to carry the goodness of Christ throughout their island nation in the midst of this crisis because they have been faithfully serving the Filipino people for decades. They have invested the hours and the disciplined practice; they have deep familiarity with the nuances of reaching Filipino homes and hearts with the truth and love of Jesus. A pandemic could not stop this team from nourishing the souls and bodies of the Filipino people any more than it could stop Emer from nourishing her family at her table.

"Jesus is everywhere, all the time," Emer says. "Jesus has been leading us all along, showing us the way to unite our church partners through prayer over social media. Jesus provided for all of our needs in 2020, even during drastic budget cuts. Jesus opened the doors for more partnerships with local pastors and churches in different provinces."

When the lockdown began in March 2020, Emer says, "I thought the ministry would stop. But God surprised me in many ways. I witnessed the power of prayer. God opened doors of opportunity for Every Home Philippines to be relevant to the Body of Christ and to the community as well."

As quarantine restrictions ease and the Filipino government secures vaccines for the country, Emer believes, "The ministry in 2021 will slowly gain momentum with more partners taking charge of house-to-house outreaches in every province. Existing partners are already empowered to develop their own teams to reach their local areas." Now, new partners will reach new provinces across the Philippines.

No matter what may come, Emer will fill her table with good things — and she and her team will invite everyone, everywhere in the Philippines to taste the goodness of Christ at the table of the Lord.

When the lockdown began in March 2020, Emer says, "I thought the ministry would stop. But God surprised me in many ways. I witnessed the power of prayer."

A Word from the CFO

It has been my honor to serve at Every Home for Christ for more than 18 years. As the CFO, I take great pride in ensuring every dollar is used effectively for the mission of reaching people all over the world with the gospel. Every Home is committed to ensuring these resources are used efficiently and are reported with accuracy and excellence.

Like everyone around the world, the pandemic in 2020 affected all of us here at Every Home. In March, we experienced significant challenges both financially, and in our ability to share the gospel around the world in the face of shutdowns, restrictions, and global economic hardships. Thankfully, by the grace of God and the faithful generosity of our many partners and volunteers, we were able to keep the ministry moving forward and overcame these challenges, ending the year financially stable and with our work around the world going strong.

This next year, our ministry will reach its 75th anniversary. We are incredibly excited to celebrate what God has done in our first 75 years and to see what the Lord will do in the coming years. We will continue to expand into more opportunities all around the world to share the truth and love of Jesus.

It is my heartfelt privilege to say “thank you” to all our partners for their generosity to this mission. If you haven’t yet joined us, please consider supporting Every Home for Christ. I believe this is one of the best investments in the kingdom of God you can make.
